The poetry in Spirits in Bondage reveals the worldview, thoughts, and especially feelings of the author written during that period when he struggled with God over his initial decision to become a Christian. Surprised, by Joy, written much later retrospectively, has a more measured, rational narrative of this period.

I've been slowly working my way through Letters of C. S. Lewis and in these letters, Lewis discusses his first book, Spirits in Bondage: A Cycle of Lyrics. He wrote to his father in 1918 about how he had amused himself over the years by writing poems, and William Heinemann had agreed to publish them in book form.
