The stated purpose of the Indian Residential Schools was to make the Indigenous Peoples of Canada embrace Western values and Christianity (those two sets of beliefs were almost inseparable at the time). In the eyes of many state officials, the agent that could and should bring about such rapid change was the Christian church.

The Role of the Churches | Facing History and Ourselves

The dominant religions in Western civilization are Judaism, Christianity and Islam, and among these we find answers to the problem of life's meaning. All their solutions are just parts of much larger theological systems developed by these traditions, and a fuller understanding of them is the job of religious studies.
